KEYMACRO is a native Windows application that can be used to create macros in any language (Spanish, German, French, English). MACRO files are created using a macro editor window that allows the user to create, edit and manage the macros. This tool uses a program called XLY (Extend Language Yoke) to translate macro files. With this translation, you can install your own templates and macros. What is this and what is the difference to the normal macros? The normal macros are stored in a library of your Windows OS and can only be executed when you open or close an application. Macros are special files that are saved in your hard disk and can be re-used. The following can be stored in a macro file: • Instructions • Text • Button/list/checkbox images • On click and command or script • File opening and file closing • Tooltip • Caption or text. There is no limit to the number of objects you can store in the macro file. There are two types of Macros: 1. Open Macros. Open macros can be used anywhere in Windows and are integrated with all open applications (eg. Word). 2. Common Macros. Common Macros are Windows native Macros that can be used in all Windows applications. You can import your own translation macros into XLY, which will open the Open Macros window. For example, you can create a new macro in your XLY and save it as a common macro. Now, you can use it anywhere in Windows. This is very convenient when you need to use a lot of Windows native Macros in any application. Most applications have more than one language, so you can select the language you want to use in the dialogs. The Open Macros editor is the same as in the normal macros. An on-line solid-phase extraction-liquid chromatographic-tandem mass spectrometry (SPE-LC-MS/MS) method was developed for the simultaneous determination of 16 phthalate esters (PAEs) in Chinese beer samples. The method was successfully applied to the analysis of 26 beer samples. A C18 sorbent (2 mL) was used for the extraction of PAEs from the samples. The effects of pH, sample volume and time of extraction were optimized. Under the optimized conditions, the developed method provided excellent separation for the 16 PAEs within 10 min. The linear ranges, correlation coefficients, detection limits (LODs) and relative standard deviations (RSDs) of 16 PAEs in beer samples were 0.1-200 µg/L (0.80-160.0 µg/kg), 0.90-0.99, 0.02-1.25 and 2.90-8.40% for LODs and 0.3-200 µg/L (1.20-160.0 µg/kg), 0.97-0.99, 0.02-0.49 and 5.70-11.8% for RSDs, respectively. The recoveries of target compounds ranged from 94.3 to 104.4% with RSDs < 10.3%. The method has been used to measure the concentrations of 16 PAEs in 26 beer samples and the results indicated that the concentrations of PAEs in the Chinese beer samples ranged from 0.38 to 49.48 µg/L (5.21-80.60 µg/kg) for di-n-butyl phthalate (DnBP), 0.78-3.47 µg/L (11.7-40.0 µg/kg) for di-iso-butyl phthalate (DiBP), 1.62-6.08 µg/L (20.
