Adobe Flash Player 11 is the last major update to this multimedia player, which brings many new features that will no doubt delight its hundreds of millions of users worldwide. Adobe Flash Player 11 is much more than a simple "player", offering quite a lot of functionality through its extensive set of embedded objects. This new release brings the ability to publish

Adobe Flash content to blogs, by enabling users to create their own movie channel. These channels offer developers a wide range of means for publishing content through other Flash-enabled websites, in the form of a movie channel, a progressive web application, a rich video player or a video flashcard for social networks and other social apps, and more. They can offer a wide range of formats and interactivity, from advertisements and banners, to flash games, video applications or educational material. This new format, however, allows developers to use some new features available in Flash Player 11. The ASYNC_AUDIO_CAPTURE feature allows Flash Player 11 to execute the capture function for MP3 audio files outside of the flash timeline, and the ASYNC_TRACK_INFO technology allows the extension of the IFPOINTERINFO tag, which is used to handle the position and width of the movie canvas, as well as the speed and volume of the playback of a specific audio file. Additionally, Flash Player 11 introduces a Flash Player-hosted debugger that allows the development and debugging of Flash content running in the "Browser.html" plug-in from Adobe's Flash IDE. These new features, and others, will no doubt delight the legions of Adobe Flash developers, and increase the availability of rich multimedia content for viewers worldwide.
